PTS Consulting employs Low Carbon Consultants

PTS Consulting is delighted to announce that its Consultants have gained official certification to be listed on The Chartered Institution of Building Services Engineers' Low Carbon Consultants Register.

Members of the Low Carbon Consultants Register are a body of professionals competent to minimise energy use and carbon emissions from buildings both in design and operation. They are able to go beyond the current legal minimum in improving the energy performance of new and existing buildings.

Clients can be sure that buildings designed and operated by Low Carbon Consultants will meet the requirements of Part L (Conservation of Fuel and Power) and Building Control Officers can be assured that compliance is being signed off by suitably qualified professionals. Members of the Register have undertaken examinations to demonstrate their competence.

Chris Frazer, Principal Consultant for IT Infrastructure at PTS Consulting said: "PTS Consulting promotes and supports working practices that will benefit the environment as a whole. The achievement of the Low Carbon Consultant certification demonstrates PTS Consulting's commitment to best practice energy use and carbon emission reduction in all building-related projects."

Dr Shaun Smith, Low Carbon Consultant for Building Operation and Critical Systems Engineer for PTS Consulting said: "The issues of energy reduction and carbon emissions continue to gain momentum throughout the building sector. There has never been a more crucial and exciting time for energy performance in buildings. This is inevitably leading to a better environment for people, which makes perfect business sense."
